Activities

Day and night game drives; conservation and ranch activities; visits to local school and cultural visits; fishing, bush and camel walks; visits to the Black Rhino conservation project

A gorgeous manor house (the private home of Nicky and Gaby Hahn) on the 49,000 acre Mugie Wildlife Conservancy in Laikipia in Northern Kenya. There are six spacious luxury cottages with spectacular views of this amazing remote region. Each room has a fire place and large bathrooms.

A unique feature of staying at Mutamaiyu is that guests can participate in daily ranch life and assist in conservation projects including lion tracking. There are a range of activities here including several cultural interactions with the local community - there is enough to occupy a visitor for many days if you wish!

Day and night game drives are included and the conservancy is home to the 'big 5'. Bush and camel walks are available as are bush breakfasts, sundown drinks in the conservancy and ranching activities. There is a Black Rhino conservation project which guests can get involved with. Guests can also visit the Mugie School, have an insight into the lives of Pokot and Samburu tribes people, visit the weekly market at Suguta Marmar and visit the Gala Graves. A cultural boma visit is available at extra cost.
