Beagle is a 32 metre steel-hulled motor schooner with classic lines and polished teak decks. She was built in London in 1971 and is named after HMS Beagle, the vessel in which Charles Darwin sailed to the Galapagos Islands. She is powered by twin Gardner engines to give an average cruising speed of 9 knots.

There 6 double cabins, with lower double and upper single berth, so ample room. There is also a smaller double cabin, which is offered for single use. All cabins are air-conditioned, have windows and have en suite bathrooms.

There is ample open and shaded space on deck, plus a large table where al fresco meals are taken. The interior is well-furnished and includes a comfortable salon. There are 2 small boats with outboards as well as 2 double kayaks.
