Eric, Flamingo I and Letty are identical motor yachts built in the early 1990s. They accommodate up to 20 passengers each in 10 outside cabins spread over 3 decks, with window or porthole views. Each cabin has either a double bed or 2 twin beds and all have ensuite bathroom with hot water shower. The cabins have individual climate control.

There is a dining room where Ecuadorian and international dishes are enjoyed, a well-stocked bar and a lounge. The latter incorporates a conference area with flat screen TV, DVD player and library. The interiors are of polished teak wood with shiny brass fittings, and picture windows on the upper two decks offer panoramic views. Outside is a spacious sundeck equipped with comfortable sun loungers. The boats carry snorkelling equipment, wet suits and kayaks for guest use.

We regard these yachts very highly, as they have obtained the 'Smart Voyager' certificate for excellence in conservation and environmental responsibility, and they are small (maximum 20 passengers) yet have two very good naturalist guides on board.
